A hypercalcemia developed in a 26-year-old male patient, who was in complete remission after receiving two cycles of doxorubicin, cyclophosphamide, vincristine, and prednisone, for non-Hodgkin's lymphoma. The high serum levels of calcitonin and parathormone associated with the hypercalcemia, as well as the eventual resolution of the hypercalcemia with hydration and bisphosphonate therapy, suggested that the hypercalcemia was related to the chemotherapy. However, treatment with these agents alone might not be the only cause of the hypercalcemia.Q: What is the proper way to handle setting variables in the view? 2d92ce491b
