Another problem I found was that I had to run "Update Apps" in Security and Privacy to get rid of this. So now, in the process of trying to get this working again, I'm getting a message saying that that my iMac is protected by FileVault and that I need to enter my password to use the internet. I can't seem to figure out how to verify that the password I used to install the program to my computer is correct. I ran it with the password that I installed it with and it worked, but I don't remember setting a password to install it. In that case, should I just install it again? Does it make a difference if I use the window app to install it, or would using sudo work for that? Please help. A: It seems like an entry in your system folders was mistakenly added to your system keychain. This explains why you always get the error message. If you have not seen a similar error before you can safely try the following: Open Keychain Access Go to the Local Items section and then click "Show Status of Unknown Items" Look for the entry that was added by SketchCassette Restore that entry You may need to repeat this step if you get a duplicate entry. I was stupidly busy today so I cannot go to the keys but I can still have this single out of a four-way. We've been slowly picking up more single kegs as distributors and wholesalers get their orders. I will definitely try to pick this up for my own brewery. I think the keg is about $43? Very tempted if I can. I figured you all might like to know that you can actually get TTB approved kegs from any store that has a current TTB license. We were gonna order an unopened keg from Kells but figured that even though it's a four-way it's still pretty useless as a single, but we'd rather have something than nothing. Can we all agree that the creepy, long-faced guy in the video is probably not a qualified tech? I have a suspicion he'd have trouble grasping a basic keg cleaning manual. I mean, does anybody actually use a dish washer for keg cleaning? There's only 3 things that can happen: a) the keg blows through, b) the inside of the keg stays carbonated, c) the inside of the keg gets tank
