A: I tried to reproduce this with my own test data, and it is not reproducible in any way. I can tell you that there is no limit to the number of raiders. In fact, when I tried it, it says I've got "2416" raiders -- and those are all the raiders I can see. I do believe there is some limit to the number of raiders per building, as I seem to be able to have 7 or 8 raiders in a building before I get a count error. But I also believe that food stockpiling works (again, in the test runs I've tried). You may want to check out which has been helpful. Leftist media outlets are trying to create fake scandals out of an investigation into a government contractor accused of breaking the law in the aftermath of the Boston Marathon bombing. NBC News — which, not so coincidentally, is owned by Comcast — has an exclusive with a Washington defense contractor that is being investigated for defrauding the government out of about $3 million. The contractor, Alliant Techsystems, was hired by the government in 2010 to manage the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's Polar Operational Environmental Center in LaPorte, Indiana. In 2012, a group of employees, including a former NOAA official and a defense contractor's employee, were caught with drugs and had their wages fraudulently billed to the government. The company is currently being investigated on suspicion of "subcontracting fraud and workplace violence." The report from NBC is heavily sourced to three people who worked at Alliant, but the report doesn't actually mention the contractor by name. In fact, the report even makes sure to mention that Alliant is a subcontractor, rather than the parent company. Alliant and NBC did not respond to a request for comment. The contractor is currently under investigation by the Department of Homeland Security, the Department of Labor, the Office of the Inspector General, and the Defense Criminal Investigative Service. They are looking into allegations that the company paid employees under the table and violated the law when it came to overtime pay. The allegedly fraudulent acts occurred between 2009 and 2010, but the
