Psychology Psychology is a subject in which people understand and understand others better, better predict their behavior, and better control their own behavior. Human behavior does not develop from the internal feelings of the human being, but primarily due to external forces. There are two main aspects of human behavior, what is termed as the physical and the mental aspects. The physical aspect of human behavior include what is termed as ‘psychological behavior’ which is the outward expression. The human body has various psychological components which influence human behavior. The human body itself is what is termed as a psychological component. One of the most important components of the human body, is the body psychology. There are two different forms of human body psychology, the conscious and subconscious mind. The subconscious mind influences the body’s psychology. The human behavior is influenced by external factors such as the environment, the society, the education, the culture, the time, and the sex. All the changes in the human behavior can be explained by what is termed as the interaction of the external forces. There are two categories of human body psychology, which are: (1) the conscious mind and (2) the subconscious mind. The psychology of the subconscious mind determines the behavior of the subconscious mind 3da54e8ca3
