Shams al-Ma'arif Maarif, Books of Category:Occult booksMultiple transcription factors regulate expression of the wheat germ agglutinin gene. The 5.4-kb promoter sequence upstream of the transcription start site of the wheat germ agglutinin (WGA) gene is sufficient to direct both constitutive expression in roots and sindora root-specific expression in transformed Arabidopsis thaliana. To identify transcription factors that regulate expression of this promoter, we conducted a yeast one-hybrid screen using all possible fragments of the WGA promoter as baits, and a novel transcription factor, AP2gamma, was isolated. Yeast strains carrying the AP2gamma box directed strong expression of a lacZ reporter gene in the root primordia. In addition to the WTAP2gamma box, the reporter genes responded to AP2box and B3 box sequences, and the WTAP2gamma box was sufficient to enhance the response to each other. Gel shift assays revealed that both AP2gamma and B3 boxes bound to AP2gamma in vitro and that B3 boxes bound to B3 in vitro. A P1 element, an NF-Y box, and a G1 box were also found in the promoter. Mutations in these sequence elements affected WGA expression in Arabidopsis, as assayed by RT-PCR analysis and GUS histochemical assays. We suggest that AP2gamma and B3 are required for expression of WGA and that NF-Y and G1 boxes play a role in this expression.Regulation of IGF2 gene expression during Xenopus laevis development. Insulin-like growth factor-II (IGF-II) is a hormone critical for fetal growth and development. The mechanism by which IGF-II is regulated during amphibian development, however, is poorly understood. We have isolated an 5kb IGF-II promoter fragment from an amphibian BAC library. This promoter is functional as assessed by GFP expression in transgenic embryos. Using a synthetic probe, we mapped the promoters of several Xenopus laevis IGF-II genes, including the one contained in the 5kb promoter fragment. The three Xenopus IGF-II genes map to 6kb, 4kb and 3.5kb downstream of the 5kb promoter fragment. These three genes are most likely the actual IGF-II genes expressed during embryogenesis because RT-PCR analysis reveals both

Shams al-ma'arif is the Arabic name for The Book of the Sun of Gnosis, the title of a 13th century Arabic magical grimoire. The book's first English translation is a selected translation by Rodney Matthews. Crew members and supporters travel to games in the same manner as football coaches, players and cheerleaders to support their teams. The United States government recognizes the crew as athletes under the requirements of the Student-Athlete Modification Act of 1987. The field equipment used in each game is provided by the team with each of the six events (scoring, passing, kicking, punting, receiving and long-snapping) being administered by separate crews for each team and its school. The crew has been the recipient of the Gold Medal award from the United States Olympic Committee since it was established in 1987. The crew has also been a sponsor of the 1995, 1997, 2000, 2004 and 2008 Summer Olympics. Crew Executive Director & Head Coach The USSSA Executive Director is responsible for overseeing the day to day operations of the Crew Program. The Executive Director works with the Head Coach to develop and implement the strategic plan of the crew program. This involves helping teams become better at crew. Head Coach Crew Coaches are the people responsible for teaching athletes to score, receive, or punt the football accurately. Most coaches and teams have a specific focus in the sport they work with. Some coaches and teams also use certain techniques to help improve the skills of the athletes they work with. Head Coach Head Coach / Quarterback coach The Quarterback Coach is responsible for teaching the players how to accurately score, receive, or punt the football correctly. This includes teaching them how to run and throw the football. The Passing Coach is responsible for teaching the players how to properly receive, catch and throw the football. e24f408de9
