It is known that a pyridinoline compound having an anti-tumor activity, namely, lositamine, as shown in formula (A) below, may be prepared by the process, which comprises reacting 1-(1-nitro-2-pyridinyl)-2-propanol with acetonitrile to give a 2-hydroxy-3-ketopyridine compound, nitrating the 2-hydroxy-3-ketopyridine compound, reducing the nitro group and hydrolyzing the oxime derivative thus formed. #STR2# However, in the prior art processes, there have been the defects that 1) the conversion rate is low, 2) a large number of by-products are formed, 3) the reaction is a batchwise process requiring much labor and much time, and 4) an expensive solvent is used in a large amount. Recently, as a new method for obtaining a 2-hydroxy-3-ketopyridine compound, a method comprising producing a 2-hydroxy-3-ketopyridine compound by reacting 2-amino-1-nitro-2-propanol with sodium hydrogencarbonate is disclosed (Japanese Laid-open Patent Publication No. Hei 7-187778). However, this method requires a high temperature reaction in an alkaline solution. Therefore, the method is not suitable for an industrial production of the 2-hydroxy-3-ketopyridine compound. <staticTextPointer name="staticText"> Alignment:
