Colon cancer is one of the most common malignancies and a leading cause of cancer deaths in the United States, causing nearly 50,000 deaths per year. The disease is characterized by the appearance of an abnormal mass, or tumor. These tumors often invade surrounding tissue, which can result in the loss of bowel functions and can lead to seeding of tumors in the other organs. Liver metastases are not uncommon in patients with colon cancer. The current treatment options include surgery, chemotherapy and radiation. However, chemotherapy is the least efficacious of these three therapies. This chemotherapy failure is due in part to the fact that colon cancer cells are minimally sensitive to many of the drugs which are currently in clinical use. At present, there are no therapeutics that have an effect on the early stages of cancer development. Therefore, there is a need for a gene therapy that can specifically target the early stages of cancer development. In addition, there is also a need for better methods for diagnosis and prognosis of the disease.

Reduce Commenting On Stats We use the stats collected by our great software. We need to be careful however, how we promote these stats and make sure that the content we present is clear. The problem being that when anybody on Twitter uses their own stats, or a customer's stats, it can, and sometimes is a source of friction. And a lot of the content is bogus, or driven by people trying to get some attention. So we've been thinking of ways to reduce comment on our stats and other services that we offer. We've come to the conclusion that we need to take away the ability for people to start comments on single widgets. The first line of our stats is, "Source: Socialbird stats by Web Analytics Reserve". This needs to be emphasised more than anything. This takes away the ability to comment on specific data points which is what we want to avoid. And we should be able to view the comments and decide if we want to approve them, instead of just having the data points disappear. For widgets with several points of data, the stats need to be clear that those are their stats, not ours. And they can't be edited like our stats normally are. The next step would be to make sure that everyone who edits our stats understands what they are, and what the limits are on them, and what the penalties are for commenting. We also
