⏺ Works with some webcam-based applications such as YAHOO, Skype and CAMFROG. ⏺ Modifies a webcam picture that is made by you in real time ⏺ While you are chatting, it will add an animated effect or a new image to your webcam picture ⏺ You can also define the amount of time the animated effect will last (seconds, minutes or hours). ⏺ You can also adjust the resolution or speed of the animated effect. ⏺ It also allows you to define the duration of each frame of the animated effect (seconds or minutes) ⏺ It can replace your webcam picture with a Flash or animated effect. How it works: ⏺ The application includes two versions: • Animated Effects version ⏺ Replaces the Background Image with a Flash Animation. • Replaces your figure with a Flash or Animated Image. • You can also adjust the duration of each frame of the animation. ⏺ When you start the application, your webcam image will be frozen. • The application will then load a hidden process. ⏺ The process will be sent a text message each time the user enters a message. • The text message includes the contents of the message as well as the process ID. ⏺ The application will then connect to the process by sending it the ID via TCP. • It will then send a broadcast message to all processes by a TCP/IP socket. ⏺ The message contains the process ID and a format that instructs the process to modify the current image. • The process then reads the format and will create an animated image or Flash animation (with the size, resolution and speed you specified). • It will then send the modified image back to the application, which will then display it. The application will then disconnect from the process and displays the modified image. • It also sends a broadcast message to all processes. • When all the processes read the message, the application will then disconnect from the processes and will replace your webcam image with the new one.
