Wednesday, July 14, 2012 A few weeks ago I started practicing the Jacob's ladder recipe from a recipe book I found at a thrift shop. It is another great recipe for what I love, which is baked fresh products. The recipe calls for fresh eggs, cream, and lots of spices, but you could make this recipe with store-bought egg product if you wanted. I decided to do this recipe with my old pasta machine because I wasn't sure how the new version would work with my pasta machine. The directions on the back of the package are a little vague (of course), but overall it worked ok. Here are the instructions I followed from the package: 1) Pour the flour and the next 12 cups of pasta flour in your pasta machine and set it to medium-large. 2) Open the folded counter of the pasta machine. Pour all of the eggs into the opening in the folded counter and then turn the counter of the pasta machine forward, simultaneously, dropping the eggs in. Fold the counter back into a box. 3) Pour the cream into the pasta machine and press the folding counter down. Now spread the cream over the eggs and repeat, folding the counter back into a box. 4) Pour 2 cups of water into the pasta machine and start pressing on the folding counter. 1/2 cup at a time. It's ok if the water doesn't run through all the way. 5) Start adding all the spices. Add 1/2 teaspoon of the ingredients at a time. If you don't have a thick enough paste you can add flour or water to help hold it together. Mix the ingredients well and make sure the whole thing is moistened. 6) When the dough is moistened but not wet, start folding the dough over on itself. The dough will be sticky, but don't worry. It will clean out in the machine. 7) When the dough is almost ready to pass through the rollers, put it on the largest
