Anthem Sports and Entertainment Anthem Sports and Entertainment, Inc., formerly known as Anthem Sports Group, was an esports organization founded in 2016 by Neil French and Marc Henry. Anthem purchased several esports organizations including APACHE Esports. In addition, Anthem sold its stake in the American esports organization OpTic Gaming to the management of the OpTic Gaming organization. In 2019, Anthem moved its headquarters from the US to London, UK after experiencing financial and operational struggles from the acquisitions. Previously, Anthem had acquired several teams in the North American and European esports organizations including: Cloud9, OpTic Gaming, Team Dragon Knights, Team Kaliber, and the Fuel Gaming organization. In January 2019, it was reported that British Counter Strike player and former OpTic Gaming player Stephen "reLtuC" Cutler had been in talks with the organization about joining a Counter-Strike team. In September 2019, it was announced that the organization would be renamed to "Anthem Sports and Entertainment".
