A: After some research, I found two more files (copy.rar and extensioner.exe) which were responsible for the bug. From these files, I found a line of code (long-long int i=0; i++) and I found it in my files. On the other hand, I noticed that this line of code was put to be executed when the program starts, and I found out why. After this line of code is executed, the program is not responding and it seems that it has a problem. But I could not identify what the problem is. There are many people, such as, @Dimi and @Dhampir, who asked me the same question about the problem. And I am sorry for repeating the same question a bit. But, still, I would like to answer these questions now.

Dhampir answered the second question, but I left two questions for others.

Dimi and @Dhampir answered questions that I mentioned in @pawan comment to my question. When I could not find the error, I asked them to check the reason of this problem. I got an answer, which I mentioned in @Dimi and @Dhampir answer. A: This is an error reported by Microsoft. Please try to download and install the latest version of the program to avoid problems like this in the future. What is Microsoft Software Centre? The Software Centre is a free Windows software distribution tool for installing paid and free Windows software on your PC. It is located in the Start Menu > All apps. No one goes quite as high as Southeastern Conference teams when it comes to the passing game. But, as James Parsons pointed out a couple weeks ago, it's not just the offensive lines that pass the eye test. Of the four offensive linemen who played against the Tigers (Wednesday, July 25), defensive linemen played a part in a season-high seven sacks. And two of those sacks were attributed to defensive linemen. So it's no wonder Georgia and Florida might be a problem for the Tigers. Toledo looks to pick up its first win over one of these teams since 2004, and it's hard to look at the box score for that week to see the difference between the Tigers and the Tigers. The fact that Missouri won that game only makes it harder to believe the Ohio State loss was a fluke. 1. Mizz
