Photo Prints I took great satisfaction in an image of my Dad's cat walking on a ladder. I, too, wanted that image to be at a professional level. My camera's memory card had just been emptied in one of my various photo editing sessions, and I thought that I'd better have a copy of it to use as a memory card for a new camera. When I got it home, I took it out and put it on the computer to print it. I had created the image using the three most dominant colors — red, blue, and white — and I had used the Alpha channel to show the cat's body with color. Because the color of the cat's body only appeared on the Alpha channel, I had no choice but to use the gradient fill tools to "paint" a nice gradient on the body of the cat. This gave me the look I wanted, although not the highest degree of quality. I printed the image using my printer and sent it to my Dad with a note with a simple "Happy Birthday" at the bottom. He was pleased with it. I'd done a pretty good job, but I could do better. Perhaps you have a friend or family member who needs some photo prints made. The key is to recognize that we all have different preferences and art standards. Is it a montage of a few photos? A single photo of you? A collage of multiple photos, with one for each member of the family? Consider what the final print will be used for — a birthday card, a thank-you gift, an invitation to an event, a portrait, or a simple snapshot of a holiday. You have the capability to design, style, and print any size you want, so if you are not sure exactly what you want the final print to look like, you may need to decide among the following: You can play with the size of the final print by using the Page Setup dialog box. If you specify to scale the final print to be larger than the original, the image will be cropped. The image is resized to fit the paper, so as the paper is added to the print, the image shrinks to fit it. This is one way to create a landscape

Studies on the metabolism of methadone in the rat by capillary gas chromatography/mass spectrometry. 1. Methadone and its sulphoxide metabolite were measured in rat urine and tissues by GC/MS. 2. By determination of the ratio of the extracted ion for the [M-H] ions of the two compounds in urine, it was possible to confirm that the reduced metabolite was sulphoxide, and not previously reported methadone-sulphoxide. 3. Both methadone and its reduced metabolite were more polar than the positive ion ionisation target compounds.

1. Field of the Invention The present invention generally relates to an injection molding machine, and more specifically relates to an injection molding machine that includes a drive unit that rotates an injection-molded-article transferring apparatus. 2. Discussion of the Related Art In an injection molding machine, an injection molding machine such as a die clamping apparatus is generally provided with an injection molding apparatus that transfers a molded article, or molded article-material, into a mold to form the molded article. The molded article is injection-molded in the injection molding apparatus. Generally, the molded article, which is injected from a mold cavity, is temporarily stored at a certain position. The time required to transfer the molded article to the mold cavity from this position is referred to as a carry-time. The time necessary for one mold cycle to form a molded article is referred to as a cycle time. The cycle time is proportional to the carry-time. If the carry-time is shortened, the molding efficiency of the injection molding machine improves. As described above, the injection molding machine that transfers the molded article by a rotational movement of a drive unit in the injection molding machine such as a die clamping apparatus is provided with a transfer shaft having a projecting portion at its rotation axis. An injection molding-article transferring apparatus (an injection cylinder and a screw) is supported by this projecting portion. The injection molding-article transferring apparatus which is driven by a drive unit rotates along with the transfer shaft when the molded article is transferred into the mold cavity. The rotation axis of this transfer shaft and the rotation axis of the injection molding-article transferring apparatus coincide with each other. This coincidence of the rotation axis provides a problem. The transfer shaft of the drive unit is supported at a position where it is rotatable around the rotation axis of the drive
