Photoshop Tips and Tricks from the Pros: You may have noticed that you can use both Windows and macOS versions of Photoshop Elements at the same time. This is possible through the "Switch Windows" and "Drag Windows" features that work right within the software application. Now you can easily switch from editing in the Windows version of Photoshop to editing in the macOS version. You can choose to only have selected images show up in the Documents or Projects panels, just as you may have done in past versions of Photoshop. This will allow you to only see your most recent work for an easier, cleaner viewing experience. The easiest way to do this is to select all the images and then click on the cogwheel icon in the upper left corner of the Editor window (next to where the full-screen, 4K display shows up). To get started, open Photoshop Elements or update it via the new "Get Updates and Support" feature within the software. This will ensure you have the newest version of Photoshop and that there are no unwanted features in the product. You can also connect your computer to a printer. This will make it much easier to change your settings whenever you wish. Connecting your computer to the printer via USB makes it even easier. You will now be able to select your printer from the Print dialog (choose Print Document from the options listed on the left). You can use optical flow to detect your location for a number of creative uses. It is available in Photoshop Elements, Google Photos, and Microsoft Photos. For example, you can use the Center and Timer tools to expose your image for a specific amount of time. This will help ensure that your image is exposed for an extended time, rather than being blinked out as quickly as possible. Open the Image menu and choose Automate > Enhance > Invert. Use the Lasso tool (make sure to choose Lasso rather than the traditional Magic Wand) to select the dark parts of the image. Invert your selection and the large white areas will be black. Now, go to Filter > Blur > Gaussian Blur, and increase the number of pixels by 10 or more. This will help soften the edges and blend the colors for a more balanced, legible image. The newest version of Photoshop Elements contains a new Levels tool that makes it easier to make adjustments to the shadows, midtones and highlights of an image. To get started, find the Shadows, Midtones and Highlights settings in the 05a79cecff

Monitoring of endotoxin contamination of hospital storage rooms: experience with a cotton-wool sampling method. A cotton-wool sampling method (CWS) was examined for a period of 9 months for monitoring of endotoxin levels in hospital storage rooms. The endotoxin was continuously measured using a chromogenic limulus amoebocyte lysate assay (CALA). The CALA endotoxin levels in the hospital storage rooms varied from 0.5 EU/ml; 23% contained at least 1.0 EU/ml; 4% contained 2.0-4.0 EU/ml. There was a significant correlation ($r = 0.92$, $p = 0.0001$) between the endotoxin levels of the rooms measured by the CWS method and those measured by the CALA. The CALA was found to be suitable for monitoring the endotoxin level in hospital storage rooms, although more refined sampling devices, such as air sampling or direct measurement of endotoxin on the surface of the material that has been stored, should be developed. A sensitive and specific fluorescent immunoassay for human cancer markers in pleural effusion. A series of antibody-coated paramagnetic beads were compared for their efficiency in detecting low concentrations of cancer markers (CEA and CA-125) in pleural effusion specimens. A bead-immunoassay using a single dilution of the immunoreagents (and no dilution of the effusion specimen) was very sensitive and specific for both markers when compared with conventional double dilution immunoassays. "Shocking" images have emerged of six children in a "dire situation" in the north of England. The images show children sitting on a park bench at a children's play area with a car parked nearby, with only one umbrella cover seemingly available. The children are being looked after by their parents at a park in Huddersfield, West Yorkshire, and were spotted by a member of the public. The children – one girl and five boys aged between two and 15 – were taken to the Royal Manchester Children's Hospital, and a police investigation was launched. British Transport Police have been alerted, according to The Telegraph, who claim the children were last seen at about 5.15pm on Saturday. One mum, who spoke to the newspaper, said: "It was a bit shocking to see them out in such a harsh environment. I think it was unsafe for them to be outside. "They were in a very small space, and they were sitting on a park bench with one umbrella cover. "They were able to access the park from a nearby cul-de-sac." Another witness, Ann, told The Telegraph that the children appeared tired as they walked up the road with only the one umbrella. She said: "They didn't look well at all. They were quiet and tired. They were just walking with one umbrella but looked a bit damp. "That could have been anything from the weather to a possible underlying health condition. "I wish I had taken a picture to show it wasn't normal, but I did think it was a bit strange." The incident comes less than three weeks after a raid at a car boot sale in Manchester revealed the plight of homeless children. According to the Sunday Mirror, the youngsters were among dozens of children living in squalor in the car park. It is reported that the children, who were aged between nine and 16, were living in tents, and were plied with alcohol and drugs. Five teenagers were arrested at the site, and further arrests could be made over "serious allegations". Dan Doonan, Labour's Children and Young People Spokesperson at the Commons, said: "Last month the Manchester car boot sale, which had previously received no attention from the media, was
