Roblox is a fully online game creation system, which was created by Erik Cassel and David Baszucki. In 2009, the platform was launched with the game "Minnie's Bow-toons" (which was later renamed "Paint Challenge" and later "Bow to the Past") Roblox allows users to create 3D games in the programming language Lua. To create a game, users first access the Roblox website or mobile app and create an account. When they are in the Roblox Dashboard, they access game creation tools and select one of the premade game templates. The design interface allows users to create games that have any of the available game elements: Characters (movable 3D figures or models), Backgrounds (artistic images, photographs, or clipart), Camera Controls, Game Elements, Lamps (artificial lights), Decorations, and Decals (textures applied on pre-designed 3D objects). The 3D game elements may be dragged and dropped on the game design interface, to form a game's skeleton. Users can also create custom objects, which are considered a new game element. They can also add voices and music to add to the game's feel. Roblox also offers a library of premade objects, scenes, sound effects, and pre-made game elements, which are fully customizable and already have sound and music. Roblox allows users to preview their games in real-time, and to download the game to play on multiple platforms. Roblox: World Adventures is a fun and free online game where you can explore new worlds, meet new friends, and play games with Roblox games from various game play genres, such as action, adventure, puzzle, and role playing. Developers can use Roblox to create their own games and share them with the Roblox community. Roblox games can also be shared with other apps and browsers via the Roblox Browser and Smart Block technology. The purpose of Roblox is to connect kids through play across the globe and across devices. Roblox is free to play, with in-game purchases available through a virtual currency called Robux. Players can access a large catalog of games and content created by developers around the world. In the beginning of each game, you get a level and get to show your creative skills to complete the level. Each level you do has a number of
